2017 Spring Faculty Seminar:
A guided workshop series for enhancing the role of writing and oral communication in your courses

What we offer:
• Expert advice and guided discussions and feedback on how to incorporate writing and speaking into existing undergraduate courses.
• Assistance from the program’s graduate consultants with the creation of writing and speaking outcomes for the course(s); the revision of the existing course syllabus; the design of materials such as assignments, scoring guides, useful handouts, and web-based instructional materials for students; and final report.
• A stipend of $750 at the conclusion of the seminar.

What you will do:
• Meet up to six/seven times during spring semester, 2017 in workshop format with a mix of expert advice, discussion, and hands-on work;
• Prepare a brief report of the changes you have made in your course(s) as a result of the seminar;
• Briefly present the results of your course improvements (and experiences implementing them) at one of the Program’s monthly “Theory Into Practice” one-hour Brown Bag lunch sessions during the 2017-2018 academic year.

When and where:
Alternate Tuesdays at 1-3p.m. on 1/24, 2/7, 2/21, 3/14, 3/28, 4/11, and 4/25 at Withers 331.
(Faculty who are unavailable at this time may wish to register for future semesters, time TBA.)

Who can apply:
• All tenured/tenure-track faculty and lecturers are eligible to apply.
• Applicants must be available on the days and times indicated above.
• The course(s) to be improved should be offered regularly.
• Participants do not have to be teaching the course while enrolled in the seminar. In certain cases, graduate courses may also be eligible.
